Hi Edward I attended the court house and chatted to Phil Goodwin and was good to put a face behind the council tax frauds. These were the points raised- He said he was concerned about the accumulation of taxes owed and they would have to pursue bankruptcy or prison. When I enquired about the reason for not pursuing this action earlier, his reply was of concern for me! That it was not a pleasant action to take. He was unsure why the debt agents had not pursued their action, commenting that I lived in an apartment block and maybe they could not access my apartment. He was aware of my application to the High Court but was not sure of its progress. He commented it would not be him attending the hearing. He insisted the LO was legal and that bulk signing was to expected, no court stamp required or my address on the liability order not required. I explained I was an integrity test case and waiting upon their action. Regards Michelle

I did not attend the court room. It was enough just to be there and hand over the paperwork.

Being in the court room a couple of years ago made no difference to my case and what I've been put through for three years in my osteopath case has made no difference either. Being a test case has been immensely stressful and I see no value in it. If I'd relied upon the value of the test case I'd be broke and unwell by now.

I've done the best I can without adding anymore stress. No doubt the council will attempt enforcement, bankruptcy and comital and being a test case won't affect the outcome.

The high court have not returned the application fee nor returned the paperwork. Regards Michelle
